t Ryle will not debate on the committee of his person. tive side of "Is It Rude to Fight In this action Chanler demands the en Provoked?" at the Jersey City on his side are very much provoked. Court had no authority to applint a fit seems that Robert was bitten seven-M. C. A. to-night, and the fellows times this afternoon by Shorty.

Shorty's other name is Pagliacci Ro-and said:

"Don't you dare swear at me, Shorty:
don't you dare be profane."

Shorty retorted to this by whanging Robert over the head with a cold storage rooster. Robert sat down on a bunch of Squashy Rocky Fords and got up very angry. He seized a meion and tossed it into Shorty's eye.

Gus the butcher over the way, describes what ensued as follows:
"Den dey had it. My heavels, didn't dey haf it! Such bumps and tumples and falls. Shorty he bite him in de ear and he chew his eyebrows, ant Robert he punch an' Rick an' holler. My it was fine. We all come out of de market ant cheered until we see that Shorty see, chewing him unkintly. Vy he bit off his clothes, ant ven de policemans come der Robert vas almost naket.
"But such a fight it vas. Vy if Robert hat been six feet high maybe he haf a show ant liek der stuffings out of dat Lago. But dey take him tenterly by der hospital and sew up his bites and bruislings. My, but it vas a fine fight."

When Policeman Fletcher arrived all of Washington Market bad gathered on the scene: Shorty was getting in his seventeenth bits when a friend shouted: "Cheesing" it somewhere up by Riverdale.

Robert was taken to the Hudson Street

Building.

John street this afternoon caused more pt in the street than there was in the building, which was afire. The fire engines drew a big crowd in the vicinity of Nassau and John streets, but the Fire Department wasn't really needed, as Policeman John Mallon, of the Old Slip station, with the assist ance of the tenants, fought the fire with buckets and had it extinguished when the firemen arrived. Among those attracted to the scenby the fire engines was ten year-old Frank O'Brien, of No. 25 Washington street. While Frank was standing on The northwest corner of Nassau and John streets watching the fire engines a piece of a steel bar, two and one-half feet long, struck him on the head and he fell to the sidewalk unconscious.

The bar had fallen from an awning on the tenth floor of the Cockeroft Building, No. 71 Nassau street. Luckily it fell first on an awning in front a tailoring establishment on the ground a talloring establishment on the ground floor before it hit the boy, but there was sufficient force in the rebound to plerce his straw hat and inflict a severe scalp wound.

The boy was attended by an ambulance surgeon and taken to the Hudson Street Hospital.
